

Captaine Christopher Carleill Esquire

At any time if Carleill led a fleet,
 Neptune would lay his trident at his feete,
 And when by land his powers he did advaunce,
 Mars himself would be glad to bow at's launce,
 Let then both Land and Sea his fame forth tell,
 Who both on Sea and Land deserved so well.

