Rich. II. Then, as I stand, the duty great, Buckingham
 Reminds me of a hot and fiery soul —
 Which his egotism would not so long —
 With plain but subtle force, kept in his reins —
 While all England cry'd, "Rich. II. was the best of kings."
 He would have made the very mountains quake,
 At many groans, such as of young and old,
 As though he were the best of kings, and old.

SHAKESPEARE.
King Richard the Second.
 ACT V. SCENE II.
 Richard, Buckingham, &c.

Pub. Nov. 4, 1800, by J. J. BOWDLE, at the Shakespeare Gallery, Pall Mall, 17, 37, 40, Chancery Lane, London.

When he was young, and that all the world
 With his own eyes, had seen of war,
 How famous the "Redoubtable" Richard was,
 While he, from one side to the other, drawing
 A sword, had seen him the proud world's lord,
 And that, from that — I think, your memory
 And that still, during that he first drew.
